

LANDSCAPE FOUNDATION STUDENTS' DESIGN COMPETITION 2011

CYCLE 4

[ENCLOSURE]

S P A C E W I T H I N S P A C E

Landscape Foundation Students' Design Competition 2011 is an attempt to encourage students of landscape, architecture, art and design to bring out new distinct ideas of 'ENCLOSURE'. The interpretations should have aesthetic dimensions and focus on experiential aspects rather than only physical ones.

[THEME]

In our experience of nature or wilderness, we are drawn towards spaces that provide safety and shelter – natural enclosures – places that are enclosed, protected rather than those that are vast, open to sky, of unlimited scale and are exposed. Enclosure defines an area, creates a scale, makes an area intimate, limited and secure. It has a separate identity in terms of experience it generates.

Landscape Foundation Students' Design Competition 2011 is an attempt to encourage students of all Spatial Design disciplines, Art and Design programs to bring out new distinct ideas of enclosure. The interpretations should have aesthetic dimension and focus on experiential aspects along with physical ones with a response towards region, culture and climate. The intent of the competition is to visualize ideas, develop themes, concepts, theories and evolve designs which you think respond to the theme. The emphasis is on a clear understanding of idea generation, rather than the practical details.

[SITE]

You may select a generic site anywhere in Indian subcontinent which you think has a potential for an exploration of ideas.

You may select a site of an ongoing design studio or live project that is an open space for community use.

You may select one of your last year's Studio Exercises (Aug. 10 – till date), which fulfills the competition site and theme criteria.

The site may include but is not limited to: Spaces for Gathering, Travel, Commerce, Sports, Relaxing, Meditation, Contemplation, Celebration, Living or any other outdoor area which is open to community use.
